MILITARY GARDENS.

An Appreciated Hobby at the Front.

How the thrifty French are turning some of their soldiers into temporary gardeners is told in a letter from an officer in their Army Medical Corps, quoted by the "Morning Post". "Gardening is one of the most unappreciated hobbies by the men at the front. There is not only the pleasure of growing flowers, but also the vegetable garden, ordered by the military authorities. This order is acceptable to the men, who have not enough green vegetables, so land has been leased, and cabbages, peas, carrots, turnips, parsley, and all sorts of salads, etc., are to be grown.

It looks very quaint to see these various gardens with their military gardeners in the new uniform of "blue horizon". Some are watching the seeds grow up and looking for the first show of green leaves, while in the distance the guns roar incessantly. Sometimes a stray shell falls in the middle of one of these gardens, and then it is the saucupin in the vegetables instead of the vegetables in the saucupin. [The French have nicknamed big shells "saucupins," which means saucupins.] Happily there is better manure to be had than the German shells. The horses of one single battery provide a whole cartful each day. Up till now the peasants took it for their own gardens, but henceforth a portion is reserved for the military gardeners. If we leave this part of France the proprietors and owners of these gardens will take back their land, but the vegetables, etc., will belong to the Army.

A SENTRY'S POETRY.
At the spot where the headquarters of this division are established there is a little hut—a sentry-box, rather—to shelter the man on sentry duty. This sentry box was found in the attic at the Mairie. It was painted with the German colours black, white, and red, and dated from the German occupation, 1871. It was repainted with the French colours, and is now sheltering a brave French soldier. However, the inscription written thereon by a German sentry forty-four years ago has not been removed, and I have copied it:—
"Hut" Posten gestanden,
Hut" Gewehr präsentiert,
Hut" in der Nähe des Märdchen.
Von diesem Schilderhaus gesicht.
Franz, 18. Juni, 1871.

This is a translation:—
I have been on guard,
I have presented arms,
I have seen many a pretty maid
From this sentry-box.

France, 18 June, 1871.
Which proves that even in 1871 there were pretty girls at ———. Forgive me, I was nearly writing the name of this place and compromising thus my country. The above also proves that in 1871 the Germans wrote poetry!

THE WAR OF IDEALS.

NATIONAL ERRORS.

Europe For Europe's Sake.

Europe, and all that makes Europe worth fighting for, began with the Greeks; when they joined together to fight the Persians they were defending Europe of the future. The glory of Europe is that it is always in the future, states a writer in the Literary Supplement of The Times. The Romans inherited this Europe from the Greeks and diffused it and made it weaker; for they believed that in their Empire its destiny was fulfilled, and so it grew stale and weary and men would not fight for it. Then the Empire perished and after it Europe almost perished too; but all through the Dark Ages the peoples fought for it against Tartars and Saracens and savages. And then in the Middle Ages the idea of Europe grew so strong that men almost forgot their own countries in it. Behind all their quarrels their had always the sense of Europe and Christendom; and a common duty to these. Europe was to be a confederation of free States, all brothers in Christendom; and the idea of nationality grew out of threat to this freedom, and became a part of the idea of Europe. The hope was, and is, that nations should keep their freedom and character and their own peculiar virtues, and yet should forget their hatreds in the brotherhood of Europe and in their sense of duty to that.

its selfishness in the larger cause, and now we are thinking of Europe more than of ourselves.

CONFLICTING IDEALS.

There is this difference between the Germans and the Allies; that they are fighting for themselves as they are, but we for Europe as we wish it to be. In their national idea there is no hope or faith or adventure. They are content with that they are; they are saved, and wish only to impose their salvation on us. But we know that we are not saved, that there is no chosen people, but only a hope for all peoples if they can attain to a stronger common conscience and a closer communion; and a keener desire to share each other's virtues. Nationality is something to defend, life, if it is threatened, but not something to worship because it is strong. When it is not threatened, then we can cease to sing about it, and dream of the Europe that shall be beyond it; and so the main purpose of the war, after we have preserved the future of Europe, is to make Germany European again. We must convince her, by our victory and by our manner of using it, that Europe still exists, and that because Europe exists, she will not be treated as she is treating Belgium now, and as she would treat us all if she destroyed Europe by her triumph. Napoleon tried to enslave her; the result is, the present Germany, so conscious of herself that she is not conscious of Europe. We shall not make her unconscious of herself and conscious of Europe if we follow her example. She is docile by nature and ready to learn from any one who professes to teach her with authority. If we, with the authority of victory, try to teach her the lessons she has forgotten, she is more likely to learn them than if we tell her that she is a pariah among the nations. Europe must believe, like Europe to her if she is once more to recognise its existence.

American Estimate.

The "British Weekly" quotes the "New York Independent" for an article entitled "The Business of Selling Death," by "One of the Salesmen." The writer begins: "I am a war contractor in a very large way." He goes on to say that the Allies are the principal buyers, for they control the sea.

Some of the smaller endangered nations have bought heavily, and some of the neutrals less in demand have replenished their ammunition wagons and forts. Germany is after cotton, and gets rubber and copper through her neutral neighbours, more or less. The British blockade cuts off war materials.

Greece is very active buying uniforms, flour, powder, and trying hard to place an order for rifles. This order was tossed aside as too small. Roumania, Serbia, and Bulgaria are after ammunition, but their orders are small.

England is fairly well off in rifles, shoes, and ammunition. France is doing pretty well. Germany is best equipped, and I know that the great shops at Essen and Liege are working day and night.

The writer, who says that his source of information are the best in the world, gives the estimate of the present number in arms, either at the front or in training. The estimate must be received with caution. The numbers seem to be vastly larger than the public believe.

England, three million.
Russia, six million.
France, four million.
Serbia, three hundred thousand.
Belgium, two hundred thousand.
Total for the Allies, thirteen million five hundred thousand.
On the other side:—
Germany, six to eight million.
Austria, four million.
Turkey, one million.
Total for the Empires, eleven to thirteen million men.

For comparison, note that the Confederates had only six hundred thousand to the Federals' three million men, and yet they held out four years!

GERMAN MAP-MAKING.

Mr. James O'Donnell Bennett, the American Press Correspondent with the German Army on the Russian front writing from Lodz (Russia) on March 20th, says: "Make your wildest guess as to the number of maps the German Government has issued to the army since the war began. Making it liberal, perhaps you will say 500,000."

Making it lavish, perhaps you will say 1,500,000. That has been my experience with everybody of whom I have asked the question in the last few days.

But going as high as you dare to, you probably won't come within miles of the answer—nor credit the answer when it is given.

It is—34,000,000. That means all kinds of maps, large and small, of cities, towns, villages, roads, provinces, and departments in the parts of the enemy's country now occupied by German troops, the parts of Germany leading into the enemy's country, and the parts of Germany now occupied by the enemy. These are not considerable now.

LOWICZ MAPPING INSTANCES.

The mapping of Lowicz illustrates the system and the extent of it. This Russian town, containing less than 15,000 population, is situated more than ten hours from Berlin, has been charted and diagrammed down to the last detail essential to the guidance of a Prussian major to whom its twists and turns are utterly unknown fifteen minutes before his arrival there.

Fifteen minutes later he knows it as well as he knows Potsdam. Clearly indicated to him on a convenient sheet of glazed paper 4 by 6 inches in size, are the river, the railway lines, the streets, the squares, the two railway stations, the military barracks, the hospital, the churches, and the prisons of Lowicz. On the little map of Lowicz before me I count twelve sharply indicated points.

Captain von Holleben, addressing the Cologne section of the German Navy League, stated that the proclamation of the submarine war against England and France "could only be proclaimed after months of preparation." Another admission that it was part of Germany's original programme and not occasioned by the so-called "policy of starving civilians" charged against Great Britain.

Telling his experiences as a censor of soldiers' letters at the front, a Church Army Chaplain said at the Queen's Hall, that one soldier wrote to four different girls, all in the same strain, using the same endearing adjectives, and only varying the name at the beginning. The censor's work in putting back the letters in the right envelopes, he added, was a little awkward.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

TRIBUTE TO THE RUSSIANS' SOLDIERLY QUALITIES.

THE SUPPLY OF BRITISH MUNITIONS.

RECRUITS RESPOND ENTHUSIASTICALLY.

ECONOMY IN FOOD STUFFS URGED IN ENGLAND.

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)

THE RUSSIANS SOLDIERLY QUALITIES.

The German war correspondents pay a tribute to the soldierly qualities of the Russians. The colossal magazines at Lemberg have all been empty of their stores, which have gone to places of safety. It would seem to suppose that the Russians will immediately retire within their own frontiers. Even now they are steadily hurrying the Austrians. The correspondents declare that the population enthusiastically aid the Austrians, who found the west and much damaged by fire, Russians in evacuating the city having burned the benzene stores.

BRITAIN'S ARMY OF MUNITION-MAKERS.

RECRUITING THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY.

London, June 25. A campaign to recruit skilled workmen for the manufacture of munitions was opened on Thursday evening, when every Town Hall in the country became a recruiting depot, and every Labour Bureau a recruiting sergeant for Mr. Lloyd George's new Army of Makers. Bureaux in the 27 London boroughs were besieged with applicants. The Scottish section of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers and the provisions of the Munitions Bill, after the visit of their to the front, by enrolling a so-called War Squad for shell production 6,000 applications were received to the 22nd inst.

THOUSANDS OF WILLING WORKERS.

Reports from the English provinces testify to the enthusiasm of the people to the appeal for munition workers. A thousand men straight from the farms were waiting to enrol at Liverpool when the bureau opened. Similar conditions existed in Birmingham, Wolverhampton, Cardiff, and other great centres. The universities have made a rallying and munition classes are forming.

HOW FRANCE IS DEALING WITH HER MUNITIONS PROBLEM.

London, June 25. A Paris message says that a remarkable Bill was debated in the Chamber. It contains measures ousting shirkers from "safe billets" and imposes varying from two to five years' imprisonment on men in the "soft jobs" and on their protectors. It provides that men indicted to the manufacture of munitions and those working in the public shall not be removed from their posts.

ECONOMY IN FOODSTUFFS ADVISED.

London, June 25. McKenna this afternoon urged economy in the consumption of food, for which, he said, we were shovelling out money to foreign countries in higher prices, whereas national restraint would mean cheaper food.

THE INTERVIEW WITH THE POPE.

London, June 25. A telegram from Rome declares that the Vatican organ emphasises the Pope, in the interview quoted, spoke in a private capacity. The Press considers the matter exceptionally grave and refused to be authentic until it was officially confirmed.

SUGGESTED TRANSFERENCE OF THE HOLY SEE.

London, June 25. Reuter's correspondent at Rome states that the invitation of the Holy See to the Pope to transfer the Holy See to Spain is occasioning much discussion in Rome.

BRITISH NATIONAL RESOURCES TO BE REGISTERED.

London, June 24. In the House of Commons to-day it was announced that Mr. Long will next week introduce a Bill providing for a register of the national resources.

WORK FOR GERMAN PRISONERS.

London, June 24. The Government has decided to allow the German prisoners to assist in harvesting near the places of detention.

MONTENEGRINS AGAIN ACTIVE.

London, June 24. The Montenegrin Army arrived on the outskirts of Scutari on the 22nd inst. after dispersing some hundreds of Albanians, who offered a weak resistance en route.

A TUG'S PRIZES.

A Montenegrin tug seized two Austrian Lloyd ships and a coal-laden barge at San Giovanni Medina and took them to Anzani as prizes of war.

BY TELEGRAPH.

REFORMATORY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLBOYS AT THE WAR.

London, June 25. Of the 19,648 Reformatory and Industrial schoolboys serving in the British Forces, 3 have won the Victoria Cross, 25 the Distinguished Conduct Medal, 20 have been mentioned in despatches, 8 have received commissions, 3 have been decorated by France, 330 were killed in action, 63 died of wounds, and 1,540 were wounded. Sir John Simon, Secretary for Home Affairs, has sent his congratulations to the Managers of the schools.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

Commissions For Skilled Persons.

London, June 24. Mr. H. J. Tennant (Under Secretary for War), in reply to Mr. E. Jardine, said that arrangements had been made to employ as officers and non-commissioned officers persons who were skilled in chemical analysis, etc., in duties in connection with poisonous gases, poisoned wells, new explosives, etc. Fellows of the Institute of Chemistry would be eligible for such Commissions.

NO SIGN OF WAR-WEARINESS IN RUSSIA.

London, June 24. The Vorwärts (Berlin) endeavours to give a clear picture of the situation in Russia, and says that to-day in Russia there is no sign of war-weariness. The people are patriotically supporting the Government's policy, and the Government, in return, are not disinclined to offer concessions to the people.

INTENSE FIGHTING ON ITALIAN FRONT.

London, June 24. Fighting has been much more intense along the whole front, heavy guns, and those of medium calibre, playing a great part. The enemy tried night-attacks at many points, but failed to recapture the ground won by the Italians yesterday. The Austrians were particularly persistent in their counter-attacks at Freikofel, but were defeated by artillery and bomb-throwing. They left hundreds of dead on the field. The communiqué adds:—The Austrians are now endeavouring to instal heavy guns along the Upper Isarco.

GERMANS SHELL AN AMBULANCE.

London, June 24. Today's Paris communiqué says:—Germans have been incessant northward of Soches. The Germans have re-bombarded Arras. The communiqué affirms that an ambulance of the Holy Sacrament suffered especially, and that nuns and nurses were killed. The Germans were quite unable to take the conquered ground in Lorraine. The French, in the recent fighting along the Foch, captured 25 officers, 53 non-commissioned officers, and 600 men.

LUXEMBURG THREATENED WITH LACK OF BREAD.

London, June 24. Luxembourg, says a telegram from Berna, threatened with a complete lack of bread, has appealed to Switzerland to help her. The latter has arranged to send forthwith a supply of flour, the distribution of which will be under the supervision of a Swiss officer.

GREAT BRITAIN AND NEUTRAL COMMERCE.

Large Compensation To America.

London, June 24. The British Government in a Memorandum details the steps taken to minimise inconvenience to neutral commerce, due to British restrictions on enemy trade. It enumerates special concessions made to America, and mentions that a total of £450,000 has been paid to American claimants, which exceeds the amounts realised by the sale of cargoes.

On the 23rd inst. French stock stood at 71.00.

SIGNOR SALANDRA.

Italy's Man of Destiny.

Until last year Signor Salandra was a secondary figure in Italian public life. A brilliant advocate and jurist, he was looked upon as the most promising of Baron Sonnino's lieutenants—Baron Sonnino, the recognised rival of the dux, and powerful Giolitti. But that was all. No one dreamt that this political lieutenant was to be Italy's man of destiny, the saviour of the 20th century, who was suddenly to throw over the steering wheel and alter the whole course of the national policy. When he took the Prime Ministership not many months ago, it was only as Sonnino's agent. But Signor Salandra did not enter the Ministry, probably because it was only a stop-gap Government, as the Parliamentary majority was pro-Giolitti. Later, on the death of the Marquis di San Giuliano, Baron Sonnino came in as his successor at the Foreign Office. By that time the negotiations with Austria and Germany were in full swing. Sonnino's entry meant a strong hand at the helm, and the development of events was at once accelerated. Two months ago the Parliament gave the Salandra Cabinet carte blanche, until it was reassembled in May. The understanding was that Italy's demands and aspirations must be met by that date have received satisfaction by pacific methods if possible, but if necessary by the assertion of Italy's will as great military power. Matters came to a head towards the end of April. Prince Salandra's mission to Rome had not brought even the minimum satisfaction required by the awakened national sentiment. The Emperor Francis Joseph, ever loath to part with any of his dominions, was slow to yield to the pressure of his more sanguine and far-seeing Teutonic ally. The delay was fatal. All the time the diplomats of the Entente Powers had been busy, and on April 26 an agreement was said to have been signed in London by the Triple Entente and Italy, whereby Italy was guaranteed all that she could reasonably hope for in the Tyrol, Istria, Dalmatia, Albania, and Asia Minor, and Italy in return pledging herself to enter the European struggle on May 20 with an army of 1,200,000 men. Then Giolitti suddenly intervened. His intention was to be "the god in the machine." In sudden flight Austria had at last been persuaded to increase her offer somewhat. Prince Bihlow, instead of communicating Austria's concessions to the Government, handed them over to Signor Giolitti. With Austria's surrender in his pocket and counting upon his faithful majority in the Chamber, the dictator came to Rome. He had carefully chosen the most dramatic moment for his descent upon the capital. The suddenness of the coup was designed to add to his prestige. But events had run ahead of the dictator, who suddenly found his dictatorship gone. Signor Salandra presented him with the fait accompli—and resigned. Had Giolitti taken office he would have found himself in an impossible dilemma; on the one hand Italy's honour pledged; on the other the certainty of a terrible revolutionary outbreak in the northern cities. The King, too, was in no less difficult a position. A Giolitti Government was out of the question; the only course open to the Crown was to decline Signor Salandra's resignation. Italy's fate was decided; her drama was to be fulfilled; the long and anxious period of indecision was over; the hour of Italy's self-realisation had arrived, of her definite entry upon the world's stage as the great Power that she is.

Prominent Scotsmen are taking up the question of utilizing black-faced wool for the manufacture of khaki, the ordinary materials for the making of which are getting very scarce. The Marquis of Breadalbane says that when he commanded a Volunteer and Territorial Battalion, his regiment was the first to be clothed in black-faced khaki, and no more suitable clothing for a winter campaign could be found. He adds his personal experience extending over many years as to the excellence for shooting purposes, and for winter wear, of garments made from the wool of the black-faced sheep. Tons upon tons of the wool are now stored in Scotland awaiting a market.

A Punjab Missionary describes his experiences on a P. and O. mail boat in the Channel, lately, says the Punjab Mission News:—"We had a most exciting run up the Channel. They wouldn't let our ship go into Plymouth. Soon after entering the Channel our captain received a wireless which caused him to dash back westward for about 40 miles. Then he went very slow, and waited for evening to come. Then it was full speed ahead all night up the Channel. All lights out. All passengers ordered to be fully dressed and to be on deck in the music-room, or smoking-room all night. So there we were huddled up all night, in the dark with life belts beside us, and constantly alarmed by the tremendous heaving over of the ship as the captain altered his course taking a zig-zag route up the Channel."

BOWEL COMPLAINT IN CHILDREN.

DURING the summer months mothers should watch for any unnatural looseness of the child's bowels. When given prompt attention at this time without trouble may be avoided. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy can always be depended upon. For sale by all Chemists and Storekeepers.

CHINESE COMMERCIAL DELEGATES AT NEW YORK.

Preparations begun by local commercial organizations and individual leading citizens for the reception of the Chinese commercial delegates insure their being entertained in this city in a manner worthy of the metropolis of the Western world," says the New York Herald. "These merchants and manufacturers, who landed in San Francisco ten days ago, are expected here next week. When a party of American business men from the Pacific coast went to China a return visit was arranged for the following year, but this was prevented by the revolution. And so it is from an Oriental republic, an empire, that the delegation now reaches our shores. The long standing friendship between the American and the Chinese peoples will be intensified by the present visit and commercial intercourse stimulated to their mutual advantage."

"WE WANT LUDWIG."

Amusing Daily Scene in the Trenches.

Writing from the front, an Army Service Corps officer says:—The R.A.M.C. is doing wonderful work out here, and the motor ambulances make all sorts of miracles possible in quick evacuation of the wounded. Some of the worst cases are taken almost from the front on litters which are practically floating hospital wards with 34 beds in each. I wonder if the fame of Ludwig has yet reached you? He was a fine big German of striking appearance, who for some reason or another took Tommy's fancy. Every morning from the trenches of the Battalion of Guards that was opposite his station came a chorus in unison of "We want Ludwig!" And Ludwig would solemnly climb up on the top of the parapet, bow his acknowledgments, and retire into the trench. Then the business of the day began, but not a shot was fired till Ludwig was safe behind cover.

An Amsterdam telegram says that the Kohrer Zeitung states that the property of the late Baron de Reuter in the Duchy of Coburg has been confiscated by the authorities.

A Paris tradesman, whose son is a non-commissioned officer in a French cavalry regiment, recently received a letter from him establishing an atrocious act on the part of the Germans. The following is the particular passage in the letter which the Paris newspapers are reproducing:—"Some days ago we took two 'Boches' prisoners; one of them was carrying in his horse's nosebag the hand of a six-year-old child which he had cut off, as he said himself, in order to take home to Germany as a souvenir for his wife. It is monstrous and incredible."
